Guilty

...and two of his sons, who are not included in the suit.

...Ronald Peterson, 34, testified for the prosecution concerning the role in an investigation of the repair work with the help of the Mississippi Highway Patrol and the state auditor.

Peterson testified the investigation revealed the ninth invoice.

He said the final invoice was written on both the eighth and ninth invoices.

"We questioned Wethin Ladner about it," Peterson said.

"He said he did not receive the money and he did not submit the bill.

Sills testified for the prosecution and stated he had entered into a cost plus contract with Rippetoe to repair the building.

Attempts by defense attorney to extract evidence that Sills informed Rippetoe that State Auditors would review the books at the end of the year was objected to by Necaise on the grounds the evidence was immaterial and did not concern the final invoice. The objection was sustained.

Throughout the trial Johnson attempted to have evidence concerning the relationship between the school board and Rippetoe admitted.

During the second day of the trial the jury was told to leave the courtroom so Vlahos could hear testimony concerning that relationship and repayment of the $4,840 to decide whether the jury would be allowed to hear it.

The action came during Rippetoe's testimony after Johnson questioned how errors were corrected in invoices Rippetoe submitted to the school board.

"Sometimes I wrote a check to the school board and other times they deducted the error from the next pay check," Rippetoe stated.

The statement was objected to by Necaise who again claimed the evidence was immaterial and not related to the motivations behind submission of the ninth invoice.

The jury was excused and Rippetoe explained how Sills had brought the ninth invoice to his attention some two months after it had been submitted in July.

He said he repaid the money in October of that year, one month after he became aware of the invoice.

Rippetoe said he was in the school board when the October Grand Jury was investigating the Gulfview matter at that time.

"They still have that $4,840 check and they (the school board) still owe me $9,000," he said.

Rippetoe explained how money changed hands between himself and the school board during the school board's investigation of the school board.

at one time loaned him $11,000 for materials to repair the school.

Johnson argued Rippetoe's repayment of the ninth invoice was not restitution.

"He was not paying anything back," Johnson said. "It wasn't just an attempt to make restitution. He was correcting an error, and honest clerical error. He didn't handle this transaction (the ninth invoice repayment) any differently than any other error with the school board."

Necaise argued the payment was restitution and Vlahos sustained his objection not to allow that evidence to reach the jury's ears.

Rippetoe, during his testimony in front of the jury, said he accidentally confused the sixth invoice submitted to him by Ladner for an invoice he thought had not been submitted to the school board for payment.

He explained he was rushed to pay his subcontractors and often worked till late Friday night before recognizing the invoice sheet Ladner submitted at the end of each week he worked.

Rippetoe said that July 10, the night he completed the ninth invoice, was his birthday.

He explained how he inadvertently copied names of employees from other jobs on to that invoice.

"Where I got the names I don't know," Rippetoe said, but the total hours did add up to the total on the invoice," he said.

Sills again was called to testify, this time as a defense witness. Much of his testimony was interrupted by Necaise, who continued to object to questions regarding Rippetoe's relationship with the school board and how errors were corrected.

Sills did state the relationship between the board and Rippetoe was "good" and stated that he felt Rippetoe did not intentionally cheat the school system.

Judge.

The jury returned the guilty verdict in less than an hour.

Generation mix benefits both old and young

Lack of contact between children and older persons is disturbing because it limits individual growth and may result in misinformation about older persons and the aging process.

"When people of different ages work together, both children and adults benefit," says Dr. John J. Lovitt, Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service gerontology program specialist.

Children achieve a new sense of time and continuity of life through this mixing of age groups. The older adult finds meaning in teaching about skills and information learned through the years.

Dr. Lovitt suggests these possibilities for increasing intergenerational (mixing of age groups) interaction:

(1) Provide time and opportunity for a one-to-one relationship between young and old. Matching interests of youngsters with the interests and expertise of older adults can give both the chance to explore each other. For instance a child with an overpowering interest in airplanes

- (2) Try to expand and enrich learning experiences with all age groups. Building a rabbit hutch, making a quilt, baking breads, cookies, pizza, or interpreting a coin or stamp collection are ideas to consider.
- (3) Plan social recreation opportunities which involve mixing age groups.
- (4) Provide opportunities for children and older adults to discuss religious beliefs, politics and news.
- (5) Provide shared work experiences in the community which will benefit someone other than the children and older adults—reading to the vision-impaired, wrapping bandages for the Red Cross, etc.
- (6) Provide for physical fitness opportunities where different age groups participate in aerobic activities, exercises, and dance.

Social workers should be trained professionals

By SHARON MUECK

Health Dept.
Social work, as a profession, suffers from being misunderstood by the majority of lay people.

The vision of a person who passes out food stamps or makes midnight raids on mothers receiving aid for dependent children to check for a husband in the home still prevails, to a large extent.

An alternative view is the "lady bountiful" idea that is a rich woman who visits the "underprivileged" and is a "bleeding heart."

Fortunately, those engaged in the practice and profession of social work rarely, if ever, fall into those categories. So, what does a social worker do in this modern age?

One of the problems social work confronts is that the results or products are sometimes not very concrete. Plumbers repair pipes, auto manufacturers produce cars, and newspaper publishers produce newspapers.

Social work intervention often produces such things as help for a former mental patient in re-adjusting to our community, finding resources such as housing and jobs for disaster victims, or easing the anxiety and fear of a dying patient in a hospital.

Who is a social worker? Many people, including neighbors and friends, provide social work-type help. And many people are called "social workers" when their backgrounds and education do not include social work skills and training. So what makes the difference?

Social workers are men and women who have completed a course of study from an accredited school or university, usually at the master's level, or MSW.

They are schooled in such areas as marriage and family therapy, community organization, social planning, crisis intervention, and social service administration.

They are distinguished from other mental health professionals in that heavy educational emphasis is placed on the importance of social conditions and their impact on the individual or family.

Social work approaches treatment of an individual or family with the insight and knowledge of what conditions the client must learn to deal with in the work place, school, and larger community.

Thus, it does no good, in this profession's view, to rebuild a man's self-esteem in your office if he cannot provide for his family, has a miserable married life, or has problems dealing with a rebellious teenager in the home.

This by no means is to say that other mental health professionals ignore these factors. Often it is simply a matter of emphasis or target for treatment.

Training for social work practice comes in three levels. A two-year junior college program exists to train individuals in human service delivery.

This usually qualifies a person to perform such tasks as "eligibility determination," intake (or initial) interviews, and resource finding.

An individual holding the bachelor's degree in social work is qualified to do limited case work or planning for clients, outreach work, and limited counseling.

An MSW is more skilled (hopefully) and can perform all of the above duties as well as supervisory functions, intensive therapy, and consultant work.

In cases where MSW's and BSW's are often members of professional organizations such as the National Association of Social Workers (NASW), or the Council on Social Work Education (CSWE).

You, as a consumer, have the right to quality care or treatment from certified professionals in the mental health field.

Social workers are not licensed in the State of Mississippi and many people call themselves social workers without the necessary training and credentials.

It would be well for persons seeking mental health assistance to ask that "social worker" where he or she was trained (and to what level).

Fall garden guide urges early start

Many Mississippi gardens produce only weeds and weed seeds in the fall when they should produce vegetables.

"Many gardeners fail to take advantage of the opportunity to garden in the fall," says Dr. Milo Burnham, Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service horticulturist.

"Gardeners who grow vegetables in late summer and early fall continue to eat fresh vegetables, thus lessening the demand for canned and frozen vegetables," he said.

Several vegetables produce better in the fall than any other time of year, he adds. These include cabbage, cabbage, rutabaga, cabbage, broccoli, cauliflower, and kale. Fall gardening also helps to reduce weed problems. Since the garden is worked until freezing weather brings activity to a halt, weeds have less chance to make seeds that will plague the garden next year.

Dr. Burnham says one of the most common errors gardeners make in planting vegetables for fall is choosing the wrong planting date. July and August are usually hot and dry, he says.

Gardeners often delay planting until there is adequate moisture with cooler temperatures, but unfortunately not enough time for vegetables to mature before they are killed by cold.

Home gardeners should check with Extension county agents for recommended planting dates, but offers this general guide for planting some favorite vegetables in South Mississippi:

Broccoli - Aug. 20-Sept. 15.
Beets - Aug. 10-Oct. 1.
Cabbage and collards - Aug. 20-Sept. 15.
Carrots - July 10-Nov. 1.
Cauliflower - Aug. 8-Sept. 1.
Head lettuce - Sept. 1-Nov. 1.

Leaf lettuce - Sept. 1-Nov. 1.

Onion sets - Sept. 1-Dec. 31.

Irish potatoes - Aug. 15-Sept. 1.

Turnips - Sept. 1-Dec. 1.

Bush Snap Beans - Aug. 25-Sept. 20.

Selective Service seeks local board members

The State Office for the Selective Service System, Edgar E. Riddick, of Jackson, reports that the local boards are seeking members to serve on the boards.

The boards are responsible for the administration of the Selective Service Act. They are composed of representatives of the community, including the military, police, and other local officials.

boards means the selective service system is following the guidance of the President. The boards are responsible for the administration of the Selective Service Act. They are composed of representatives of the community, including the military, police, and other local officials.

(Special to The Sea Coast Echo)
PEARL RIVER, La. — Two Hancock County horses won races Sunday at Oak Downs, and two others owned by former Hancock residents also visited the winner's circle.
Miss Rattle Star, owned by Terry Peterson of Necaise Crossings and trained by Richard Graham, was a surprisingly easy winner over Queenie Moon in the 300-yard eighth.
Two times Chickadoo, owned and trained by Frank Comfort of The Kiln and ridden by Marty Comfort, won the 300-yard 11th against Shake Rattle and Fly.
Both Miss Rattle Star and Two Times Chickadoo have won several races this year at Oak Downs.
The longest race of the day, six furlongs, was won by Papa Fred, owned by former Hancock resident Reginald Ladner, who now lives in Gulfport. Riding Papa Fred to an easy win was Marty Comfort.
Another former Hancock County resident visiting the winner's circle was Garland Dedegaux of Lake Charles. His Petite Sir took the five-furlong sixth with a time of 1:06.41 against Fast Ready, who apparently was neither fast nor ready at 1:07.36.
Aboard Petite Sir was Roger Rashall, a youth from Texas who won his first race ever.
In a 440-yard race attracting much attention, Pumpkin Centerflash, owned and trained by Alvin Addison of Loranger, proved to be no flash in the pan.
Pumpkin Centerflash ripped off an impressive 22.43 clocking in posting a one-length win over Watch Mama Go, with two others farther back.
Leo Erick of Picayune was aboard the winner, and also had three other victories on a hot, dusty afternoon.
The first two races of the day were won by George (Junior) Rester of Wiggins. His Bold Chari captured the five-furlong first and Ethanol Jr. took the three-furlong second against a pair of Hancock County horses, Conrad Joe and Miss Stylish.
A special race will be held Sunday, Aug. 9, for two year old quarterhorses that have run at least one time at Oak Downs in 1981.
Entry fee will be $200 each for the 400-yard race. Proof of age must be presented before running.

Oak Downs also will have a fish fry that day, announced manager Louis Smith.
SUNDAY'S RESULTS
1) 5 furlongs, Bold Chari, 1:08.82; George Rester, owner and trainer; Leo Fricke, jockey. Shawn Ruler, 1:09.34.

FISH TALE—Bill Randolph of Bay St. Louis, left, and Frank Corso of New Orleans recently caught this 15-pound redfish without the benefit of fishing tackle. While strolling along the shore of Bay St. Louis, the men saw what appeared to be a fish in shallow water. Their noses bent when an attempt was made to spear the tide-trapped fish. Not to be outdone, Randolph produced a towel from his pocket and the two grabbed the unlucky fish by its tail and pulled the big red to shore. How's that for a fish tale? ## Research Lab continues stocking Jourdan Bay Personnel of the Gulf Coast Research Laboratory strided bass project from April through June reared 337,000 striped fry and then stocked them at fingerling size in Mississippi coastal waters. A group of fish from the South Carolina hatcheries, numbered approximately 293,000 when released on May 25 in the Biloxi Bay system. About 46 percent of the fry reared survived, according to Dr. Thomas McIlwain, assistant director for fisheries research and management at the Laboratory.

On June 18 and 19, another 4,000 lab-reared fish from Virginia were stocked in the Jourdan and Wolf rivers. The survival rate of this group was 5.8 percent, substantially lower than the first group, McIlwain said.

"We still had the first group of fish in our tanks when the second group was shipped to us, and the fish were very crowded. As a result, there were problems with cannibalism," McIlwain explained.

In addition to rearing and stocking bass, project personnel were responsible for stocking 500,000 fish reared at U.S. Fish and Wildlife hatcheries in Meridian and Carbon Hill, AL.

"In all, we stocked 1.8 million striped bass fingerlings in Mississippi coastal waters this year," McIlwain noted.

Project personnel are continuing the monitoring and assessment phases of the striped bass program. Night seining is still being used and has proved very successful. "By seining at night when the young stripers are feeding, we are increasing our knowledge of where the fish are and what they are feeding on," said Larry Nicholson, project leader.

"We continue to receive numerous reports of large fish being caught, so we know that our stripers are surviving well," Nicholson said.

Always observe the safety rules when you play. Remember the National Society to Prevent Blindness. Wear special eyewear for sports activities. Eye protectors for people who play require corrective lenses are available at sporting goods stores or through many eye doctors and opticians. If you require corrective lenses, have your prescription made up in safety glasses.

Ladner operations highlight Hancock Farm Tour

FARMER'S WELCOME—Dickie Joe Ladner, left, owner of Ladner Farms explains his operations to visitors making Farm City Tour sponsored by the Hancock County Chamber of Commerce, Hancock County Farm Bureau, and Hancock County Extension Service. The locally-based farm operation covers six Mississippi counties in addition to acreage in Alabama, Florida, Texas and Wyoming. Ladner uses the latest equipment and technical advances in his cattle and soybean operations.

TRYS OUT TRACTOR—Betsy Adamson steps down from a Ladner Farm tractor after checking out power steering, tape deck and air conditioning. Dickie Joe Ladner, owner reports most of the tractors are driven by women and work on a 24-hour a day basis during planting and harvest operations.

WEIGHING COWS—Fat Stack, cowboy at Enshallah Ranch in Pearl River County, scales on incoming cows just purchased in Florida. The cows were weighed in small groups as they were unloaded from truck for a rest period before being transported to Ladner Farms cattle farms in Texas.

PEANUT FARMER—R.L. Dossent, second from left, shows developing peanut to Farm City Tour visitors last week. The trip sponsored by the Hancock County Chamber of Commerce, Hancock County Farm Bureau, and Hancock County Extension Service (County Agent, 4-H Agent, Soil Conservation Agent), attracted more than 40 persons.

McLEOD PARK—Persons making the Farm City Tour were treated to soft drinks and donuts at McLeod Park. Those waiting to be served from right are, Gerry Benigno, Hancock County Chamber of Commerce executive secretary; Jennifer Proff, Suzanne Hillie, Pat Mary Caillier, Hancock County Park Commissioner and her husband Davis Caillier.

SAFETY FIRST—Tommy Elliott, an Auburn graduate manager at Ladner Farms, told visitors during Farm City Tour how safety is stressed at the farm. Elliott, who is in charge of the crops, says the operations are a day operation during planting and harvest and it is very important to adhere to all safety precautions.

RANCH LAYOUT—Dickie Joe Ladner, owner of Ladner Farms explains layout of his 2,000 acre Enshallah Ranch in Pearl River County. The ranch included a mill for cutting feeds, visitors house, homes for ranch hands, breeding cattle, grazing and cattle finishing lots.

PAGEANT ACTIVITY—Charlotte Clark of Bay St. Louis, left, and Jan Melizier of Piquette, enjoyed a western barbecue at Ocean Springs' Gulf Hills Inn during Miss Hospitality Pageant activities last week. The pageant is sponsored annually by the Division of Tourism, Mississippi Department of Economic Development. Patra Massey of Mendenhall is 1981 Miss Hospitality.

HORSING AROUND—Miss Hospitality contestants horse around with the judges during a western barbecue party, a lighter moment in the schedule of rehearsals and judging surrounding the pageant which was held in Biloxi at the Mississippi Coast Coliseum last week. Sponsored annually by the Division of Tourism, Department of Economic De-

Hancock schools urge new students to pre-register

Students entering Hancock County School District for the first time in the 1981-82 school year are urged to pre-register in the school office.

Parents are reminded that Mississippi Law requires a beginning first grader to be six years old by September 1. First graders will need a certified birth certificate and a certificate of compliance (blue slip) from the Hancock County Health Department or your local doctor.

Students presently enrolled in Hancock County School District only need a new blue slip if shots are due.

This year all students must have a certificate of compliance.

Registration for schools in the Hancock County School District for the 1981-82 school term will officially begin on Wednesday, August 12. All cafeterias will be in full operation the first day of school.

Faculty workshop meetings will be held August 17. The district population of the district for the 1980-81 school term was 2,000 and is served by three elementary schools, one junior high and one high school.

The district is served by a five member board of education and is accredited by the State Accrediting Commission and also accredited by Southern Association of Colleges and Schools.

The School District employs 115 full-time classroom teachers and administrative staff.

The pupil-teacher ratio is 21-1. The district employs two full-time guidance counselors, 16 special education teachers, one speech therapist, one Title I Instructional Supervisor and two school nurses.

In addition to the aforementioned specialists, the district employs 20 teacher aides in Title I plus three in Special Education working with students who have dif-

TIGER DRUM MAJOR Les Parker, 17, son of Howard and Jan Parker of Washington Street in Bay St. Louis, has been selected to lead the Tiger Pride Band for the 1981-1982 school term. A scouter, Parker has been in the music program at the Bay Municipal School System since 1975. Starting out on alto saxophone, he has been a member of the band for five years and has served as drum major. He attended auxiliary and band workshops at The University of Southern Mississippi for the past three summers, achieving advanced students' rank. (Staff photo by Edgar Perez)

Babysitter seminar planned at Memorial

Just in case changing a diaper, feeding a baby and first aid is not second nature to a teenager, Memorial Hospital at Gulfport in cooperation with the Gulfport Junior Auxiliary has planned a Super Sitter Seminar to acquaint them with what to do in certain situations.

The seminar, planned for Wednesday, August 19 from 1 to 4 p.m. in the hospital conference room, will provide information about caring for infants, toddlers and preschoolers.

Also covered will be tips on safety and emergency measures, information on growth and development of children, ideas for playing with children and the responsibilities of babysitters. Parked free of charge will be given to those attending. There is no charge for the seminar but reservations are required and it is limited to ages 12-18.

Enrollment is limited to no more than 20. Representatives of a number of community services will assist in presenting the program.

Teenagers interested in enrolling should call Memorial Hospital at Gulfport, the Public Relations Department 869-1441, extension 5555.
